30-hour Famine Retreat March 9-10, 2018

For the message about the cross is foolishness to those who are perishing, but to us who are being saved it is the power of God. -1 Corinthians 1:18

April Fools! Happy Easter! On April 1 we will be saying both of these things. This year, in the year that church holy days connect with worldly celebration days (like Ash Wednesday and Valentines Day), we experience this delightful mashup. I like it. Easter is the day we celebrate God's great joke on death-- for death thought he won, we thought Jesus was dead on the cross, but on Easter morning we find that Jesus is miraculously, amazingly alive!

It's gotten me thinking about the foolishness of being a Christian. For truthfully we start in foolishness. The first chapter of 1 Corinthians outlines it for us. Proclaiming the cross is foolishness. Proclaiming one who died in the most horrific shameful way, and proclaiming it proudly is foolish. Proclaiming that the one who died in this way is now alive- well that is even more foolish. But as Paul writes: "For God's foolishness is wiser than human wisdom, and God's weakness is stronger than human strength." And so we begin in foolishness, and we don't stop there.

Many of our Christian practices seem foolish by the world's standards. We gather on a Sunday morning, a day when many people are sleeping in. And we gather to sing! In public! With others! We gather with people that are different than us, people who vote, live, think and spend their days and lives differently than we do. We share a meal together, the great many of us, a meal that we believe is the body and blood of Christ, that doesn't look like much, but feeds us and sustains us in a different way than a regular meal does. We give away our hard earned money. We welcome and take care of people that much of the world has forgotten or would rather forget. We love. We don't fear talking about death. We celebrate life in the midst of death and hear the promises of God for life eternal. We are fools for Christ!

This Easter season (which lasts 50 days because one day cannot contain all the joy of Easter!) we will live our foolishness joyfully as we celebrate LIFE-together. Each Sunday we will sing joyfully, together. We will hear of Christ's appearances to the disciples after his death and resurrection. We will learn of the early church's ways. We will hear from 1 John about LOVE and how powerful and amazing it is.

We will also do the important and challenging work of thinking about how we as a community of St. Mark, different though we may be, come together around a shared set of values. On Sunday, April 22, you are invited to join us after 10am worship for lunch and an exercise in discerning our values. All are welcome. All are necessary as we share the stories of St. Mark's impact on our lives and discern from those stories our key values. (see page 3)

Also in this season, when we are joyfully aware that death has lost its power, we will address death without fear. See page 3 for more information on our Death Has Lost Its Sting Forum Series. Also, be on the lookout in the coming months for information about the Columbarium and Memorial Garden.

Together we are fools for Christ, celebrating LIFE-together!

Peace,
Pastor Christie

What's Happening in Youth & Family Ministry?

On March 9 & 10, three High school youth along with Deacon Dave and Mrs. G. (Jill Galyon) participated in the 30-hour Famine Retreat. After eating lunch on Friday, we began a juice fast, drinking juice for meals & snacks and water for the next 30 hours. To keep our minds off of food, we stayed busy learning about hunger. (Pictures of this event are on the cover of this CrossBeams). First we went to the grocery store and tried to buy 15 meals (enough for 5 days) with $7.50. Then we returned to church and packed trail mix for our PADS guests. We did some research about hunger and put the information up on a Bulletin Board. To finish the evening activities, we had a candle lighting/extinguishing ceremony representing the number of children that would die in 2 minutes from hunger related issues. On Saturday, we walked a mile before drinking our breakfast juice, representing how many have to walk miles to get water. We packed bags of food for our Backpack ministry and then went to Feed My Starving Children to pack meals. Any time over the weekend when we were sitting talking or watching movies, we were making paper chains which we hung in the sanctuary for Sunday morning worship and kept them up for Wednesday Lenten worship that week. We made 3600 links which represents the number of people who die of malnutrition in an hour—the time we are at Sunday morning worship! On Saturday evening, we broke our fast with rice, beans and fruit as we discussed our experience of the weekend.

Crosswalk

By Deacon Dave

“Crosswalk” seems more like a Lenten newsletter article title, not like an Easter newsletter article title! Maybe it was the early article deadline or the particularly sunny day while I was writing my article that led to the topic. Anyway, here we are, in Easter and talking about crosses.

This spring we have been considering the crosses that adorn our worship space and campus. I wanted to organize a prayer station activity in which people went on a mini-pilgrimage around the church and enjoyed the many crosses that are a part of our worship. FaithWalk students helped me find many of the crosses. They have such fresh eyes. They see many things I look past or they spend more time during the sermons looking around. Judy Fell, Cynthia Pershing, and Carole Bloomquist helped me find more information about the crosses. And over the last few weeks I have been thinking about these beautiful crosses.

On many days the crosses are less visible than on other days, but as we began to look at them the sheer number of crosses began to be apparent. As we considered all these crosses we also began to realize many of them had stories, theological ideas about God, and unexpected graces embedded in them. Maybe those things make this idea of crosses in Easter more reasonable. Maybe it is the element of surprise and new life that is such a big part of Easter and spring that ties crosses and Easter together. I’m not sure, but like Easter every year I find myself walking into a new world, slightly awkwardly and unsure, but full of optimism and eager to see the signs of new life. Even in the most unlikely places, like the Cross.

For me, the most interesting pairing happened in the midst of the crosses and Lent during a children sermon. I was trying to weave together the idea of the crosses in the worship space with the paper chains that the older students had made for the 30 Hour Famine (each of the links of our black and gray paper chains, 3,600 in total, represented each of the people who would die that hour from hunger). Really without planning to say it, I said: “There are a lot of crosses in this space. I wonder if there are more than the paper chains? I guess I hope that there are.” I guess that’s also why I’m writing about crosses in Easter. My Easter hope this year is that there are more crosses (places of God’s unexpected love and resurrection) in our world than the chains of death and loss.

I wonder what you have found interesting or surprising about the crosses in our space? I wonder if you have a favorite cross? I wonder if you have any crosses you might want to share or display at St. Mark? I wonder if there are crosses you have seen that I haven’t? I wonder.

Thoughts from the Loft

Easter is a time that conjures up many good musical memories for me. Playing the Hallelujah Chorus and other favorites I find especially meaningful. What about the time after Easter Sunday? Could that time possibly be just as meaningful as Easter Sunday itself? I find music for the entire season of Easter uplifting, as it points us to the empty tomb. Even when the music is in a minor (sad) key rather than a major (happy) key, we sing our praises with gladness. Christ is Risen! He is Risen indeed! Alleluia!

Peace,
Tim

Book Study

Carl Anderson and David Webb will lead a discussion class of the book by Harvard sociologist Matthew Desmond, Evicted: Poverty and Profit in the American City. This book is a nonfiction work that reads like a novel. It offers a close up nonjudgmental look at the lives of tenants and landlords in the struggle to find housing and some sense of "home" in the poverty stricken area of Milwaukee during 2008 - 2009. For those of us involved in the PADS program, this is a must read as it brings us close to the real characters' daily lives.

We will hold a two-week class during late April/early May on either Monday or Tuesday evenings. It will be most helpful to get the book early and read it before the class. Desmond does not suggest easy answers to the grinding cycle of poverty, unstable family structure, and poor education but helps us experience it up-close. This is an "adult" book with an unvarnished look at real people, but is an excellent read for HS students as well. Amazon sells it for about $12. More details later.

Welcome New Members!!

On February 11, we welcomed new members into our midst.

Rob, Jill, Ella and Lucy Bahmann discovered St. Mark through the girls playing basketball at the Center. They tried out our worship and liked that we have a blend of traditional and modern components. The family enjoys time together at sporting events or Indian Princesses through the YMCA. Ella has joined Faithwalk and Lucy will begin next year.

Sharon Stobe joins us from a lifetime of being a Lutheran. She came to St. Mark last fall to try out a different Lutheran church and stayed because she likes our traditional worship. Sharon found she knew many people here from her activities in gardening and writing groups. Sharon has pursued a variety of hobbies over the years and currently enjoys flower arranging.

Justin, Kerri, Ashley and Kaylee Thorsen connected with St. Mark through the preschool. In 2016 we baptized Kaylee and Kerri and this year the family decided to make their membership official. Ashley enjoys WOW and the family participates in our events. They write: "We like to be as active as possible. Ashley likes to play with her babies and sister, Kaylee likes to do whatever her sister does. Kerri likes volleyball and to workout. Justin likes to workout and chase the kids around with Kerri."
