

The Cambridge2Cambridge (C2C) Cyber-Challenge

C2C is an international cyber security competition, jointly organized by and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology's Computer Science and Artificial Intelligence Laboratory - CSAIL (US) and the University of Cambridge (UK). Now in its third year, over 100 brilliant students from the most prestigious cybersecurity universities across the two countries will receive dedicated training and practice in cybersecurity throughout the academic year and will compete in intense hacking challenges on a dedicated cyber-range, initially online and then face-to-face in mixed teams. The three-day program of live challenges and social activities will be hosted at MIT CSAIL in the summer of 2018.
