Here is what one YES member has to say .....

"I started in the industry with very little understanding of the importance of personal and professional relationships. Like others, I was young and in my first meaningful job. When a colleague was unable to attend a CIPH luncheon I jumped at the opportunity to see what the industry leaders are doing at the business meetings. It was at that first meeting I was able to witness how a portion of our business was conducted. I was mostly too shy and inexperienced to approach new conversations because of my self-perceived experience gap. I eventually grew more comfortable at the events because I was seeing familiar faces and meeting others in a similar position as me. When YES (Young Executive Society) was created I immediately dove into the idea and got involved as much as I could. I felt strongly about trying to avoid my first experience for other younger employees who are just starting to attend CIPH events. I have definitely met new people and established long term relationships along the way because of my involvement within CIPH and YES. I would recommend giving it a shot by coming out to an event and you'll never look back. The personal aspect of our unique business makes the events valuable for future growth personally and professionally."
