Library Overdue Fines: They're a nuisance. Why do Libraries still charge for late returns?

The Elizabeth Public Library was established over 100 years ago. At that time, a penny a day overdue charge was pretty standard for public libraries. Books were expensive, and the goal was to have books returned in a timely fashion for the next reader. Today, while most EPL fines remain low at 10¢ a day, a family of five checking out 12 books could owe $6 at the end of a week, and this could be painful for those on a tight budget. While the Library's goal is always to have books returned, for use by the next person, sometimes fines become an obstacle and it seems smarter to keep the book rather than return it and pay the overdue fine. So fines can end up hurting our readers because they can't afford to pay a fine, as well as the Library because books are not returned for other readers.

This Catch-22 is one reason why the EPL Board of Trustees recently approved a "Read Down Your Fines" program for children and teens.

Rather than be denied access to reading material, for school or entertainment, because of accumulated overdue fines, those 19 and younger can now read print material in the Library, and "earn" $1 toward fine forgiveness for every 15 minutes of reading. So a $4 fine can be 'paid off' with one-hour of reading! This program does not apply to lost or damaged books, or to items checked out under someone else's name. But if you love books and love reading, use that love to

GOT HEAT?

Thanks to a Clean Energy Grant sponsored by the State of New Jersey, the Elmora Branch of the Elizabeth Public Library recently upgraded its aging heating unit. The 10-ton unit installed on the roof in April carried an incentivized cost of $5,000, representing an $11,000 savings. Add in the upgraded thermostats and ancillary HVAC equipment, plus the lighting improvements completed earlier in the year, and the Library's savings come to $20,000. Plus we anticipate $5,000 in annual energy savings. Bottom line, warm and thrifty!
