Materials in the New Now

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course explores new, innovative, and alternative materials that are emerging in the field of architecture, interior design and industrial design. The course is intended to inspire, delight, and challenge every designer's notion of what materials are available on the market and how they can be used on projects. Designers will see unique materials as well as familiar ones, and learn how they can be used in unexpected ways. The materials will be examined in the context of current trends in the global design industry as well as popular culture, taking into account sustainability, advances in technology, globalism and human emotion.

Credits available:

IDCEC – CEU – 0.1 credit
