WHO should get a health screening?

People of all ages, even those who have no diagnosed condition or symptoms of ill health and those who feel perfectly healthy.

WHAT is a health screening?

Tests to detect disease early in people who look or feel well. It will pick up health conditions that are present at the time of screening.

WHY should I go for a health screening?

To detect a disease or condition even if you feel perfectly well, without any symptoms or signs of ill health. Early detection, followed by treatment, can result in a better outcome, and lowers the risk of serious complications.
