

Tax | Accounting | Financial Strategies

Not All Income is Taxable

Have you received any of this income?

There are certain types of income that are not taxed and do not have to be reported on your tax return. These include child support, military allowances, veteran's benefits, welfare benefits, Social Security Supplemental Income benefits (SSI), and workers' compensation.

Also, a cash rebate that you received for purchases, such as a new car or appliances, is not considered taxable income.