Boundaries protect the essential nature of persons and things, while at the same time contributing to their definition.

Boundaries are therefore necessary for the faithful expression of identity. In the life of the church, boundaries are intentional limits placed on thoughts, words, and deeds to safeguard the protection and to guard and protect the integrity of the church's identity and mission....What is at stake in tending boundaries is preserving the integrity of each person as made in God's image, the value of holy things set apart for God's purposes, the identity of the church as the body of Christ, and the mission of the church in extending God's reign."

From The Integrity of the Body of Christ: Boundary Keeping as Shared Responsibility by Arden F. Mahlberg and Craig L. Nesson.

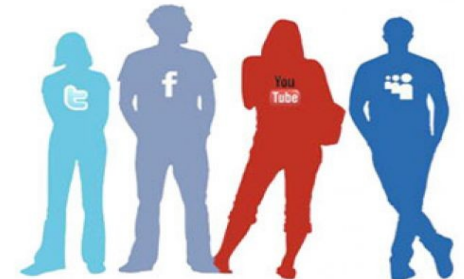

Many insurance carriers require that pastors and deacons participate in regular boundary training workshops for liability purposes.
