President
Raths, Raths, & Johnson, Inc.

RATHS, RATHS & JOHNSON, INC.
ENGINEERING · ARCHITECTURE · FORENSICS

Kurt Hoigard is a licensed Professional Engineer and Senior Principal at Raths, Raths & Johnson responsible for the leadership and project oversight of the firm's evaluations, investigations, and field and laboratory testing services. His career at RRJ spans 33 years specializing in the investigation and repair of distressed and deteriorated structures and the performance of building materials and systems.

He has consulted in the areas of preconstruction, peer review, implementation of construction quality assurance programs, water leakage investigation, complete collapse, and repair/restoration design. He serves diverse clients nationally from property owners, contractors, architects, engineers, and material suppliers to insurance companies and attorneys.

Abstract:

A professional engineer licensed in 35 jurisdictions and with more than 30 years of experience investigating problem projects and providing expert testimony lifts the veil on the delegated design process to describe how it should work and how it can go awry.

Learning Objectives:

- A. Learn what delegated design is and how it can be beneficial to the design/construction process.
- B. Learn how building codes and code officials address, or in some cases don't address, delegated design in the construction permit process.
- C. Learn the responsibilities of the various parties when delegated design is used.
- D. Learn pitfalls to avoid when incorporating delegated design into your projects.
