

Call for Papers: Psychosocial and Clinical Issues in Anxiety in Older Adults.

Clinical Gerontologist is soliciting manuscripts for a special issue on Anxiety. We are strongly interested in manuscripts that focus on intervention including results of randomized trials, pragmatic clinical trials, and program evaluation. In addition, we seek papers addressing the intersection of anxiety and medical conditions including dementia, co-morbid psychiatric conditions and co-morbid illnesses such as cardiovascular and pulmonary disorders. Other topics of interest are: assessment; different populations (e.g., inpatient versus community dwelling, nursing home populations); original research reporting course, risk and protective factors, and consequences of anxiety. Papers may be original research, review papers, or clinical comments presenting cases or small sample research applications. Deadline October 1, 2016.

Clinical Gerontologist is an interdisciplinary journal relevant to the needs of behavioral health professionals. Content focuses on emotional and psychosocial health of older adults at the intersection of science and practice. <http://www.tandfonline.com/loi/wcli20#.V3bK96pf3cs>

Special Issue Editor: Sherry Beaudreau, PhD

Action Editor: Nancy Pachana, PhD