

CENTRAL VALLEY VENTURE FORUM

Do you have a venture that needs capital?
If so, we encourage you to apply for the showcase at the 11th Annual Central Valley Venture Forum on Thursday, November 3, 2016 in Clovis, CA.

The Central Valley Venture Forum (CVVF), created in 2006 as a partnership with the Lyles Center for Innovation and Entrepreneurship and the Central Valley Fund, brings together financial leaders to discuss the Valley's current economic issues and opportunities for growth. Venture capitalists, angel investors, leading startups, corporate executives and community leaders make up the day-long program each year.

A handful of promising ventures will be selected to pitch to investors in a competition for Best of Show. Ventures who have pitched at previous Central Valley Venture Forums have received funding and have been the subject of many great success stories. Don't miss out on this opportunity!
