2017-18 ANNUAL REPORT

The Children and Family Law Center at Washburn University School of Law prepares law students to provide high-quality legal representation for children and to advocate to improve the quality of justice for children and their families.

DIRECTOR'S MESSAGE

Children and Family Law Center Encourages Family Advocacy

LINDA ELROD, '72Richard S. Righter Distinguished Professor of Law

The Children and Family Law
Center is celebrating its 17th year at Washburn Law. Although Washburn has had a concentration in family law since 1994, and Wade Bowie Jr.
was the first lawyer to earn a family law certificate in 1998, the Children and Family Law Center (CFLC) itself was the first Center for Excellence, officially established in 2001. From the beginning, the Center has enjoyed the support of alumni, several of whom have made significant contributions in time and money.

Over the years Nancy Maxwell, Sheila Reynolds, and Lynette Petty, '87, helped me with Center programs. They are all retired. In the fall of 2017, Associate Professor Gillian Chadwick joined the Washburn Law Clinic, handling cases in family law, immigration, and domestic violence. Gillian has been a great addition to the CFLC and jumped in immediately to help with activities. She has written an article, testified before the legislature, helped write appellate briefs, done intake in DV cases, and helped students work on a variety of projects.

The CFLC remained active this year, starting in the fall by hosting a "Judge in Residence" from Uganda. The following pages show several of our Lunch and Learn presentations on an assortment of topics. There were volunteer activities and a practitioner/ scholar in residence in the spring. Two students earned the family law certificate in December 2017.

Elrod presenting "Family Law Update: International, National and State" for the 29th Annual Ellis County Bar Association and Gene F. Anderson Memorial CLE on May 4, 2018, in Hays, Kansas.

I have also been busy. In the fall, I made three presentations, and attended ABA Family Law meetings and the Uniform Family Law Joint Editorial Board for which I am Reporter. I made five CLE presentations during the spring semester.

One of the more memorable trips was to Scotland in March. Edinburgh Law School hosted a family law conference, "Changing Family Forms." The keynote speaker was Sir James Munby, President of the Family Division of the High Court of England and Wales, who detailed five changes that could help families in court. Dr. Gillian Black, senior lecturer in law, invited me to speak.

Elrod with Dr. Gillian Black of Edinburgh Law School.

I spoke on "Trends in Relocation Law: Evaluating a Child's Best Interests." Because the conference was spring break week, I was able to spend a couple extra days to see Holyrood House, St. Giles Church with the Order of the Thistle, the Royal yacht, and the bees at Rosslyn Chapel!

Family Law CLE Programs

ADVANCED FAMILY LAW

Professor and CFLC Director Linda Elrod

The Kansas chapter of the American Academy of Matrimonial Lawyers (AAML) and the Children and Family Law Center cosponsored an Advanced Family Law CLE at the Ambassador Hotel in Wichita, Kansas on September 22, 2017.

New Jersey attorney Dale Console spoke on "Understanding Arbitration: Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" She dispelled the myths that family law arbitration is binding, unappealable, and cost-prohibitive. She highlighted the Uniform Arbitration Act, the Revised Uniform Arbitration Act, and the new Uniform Family Law Arbitration Act. Console also detailed techniques to manage issues that arise in arbitration and to draft "bullet-proof" arbitration agreements.

Scott Mann and Elizabeth Hill of Collaborative Divorce Kansas City LLC explained the interdisciplinary team approach for collaborative divorce and how to create it. Elrod discussed the new ABA Formal Ethics Opinion on the lawyer's obligation to protect client materials in a cyber world.

Chicago divorce lawyer Jeff Brend teamed with Steve Blaylock, family law practitioner from Wichita, Kansas to discuss the various items that can comprise income for setting child and spousal support—including pirate treasure! The program ended with Ten Hot Tips from Ten AAML fellows.

EVALUATING ALTERNATIVES, MAKING GOOD CHOICES

"Evaluating Alternatives, Making Good Choices: Family Law's Use of Case Management and ADR," sponsored by the CFLC, was held at Washburn on December 8, 2017.

As case management has changed, with more emphasis now on parent coordination and mediation, our program has changed. This year included a presentation by Dr. Bud Dale, '09, licensed Ph.D. psychologist and attorney, on "How to Understand and Work with a Parent Who has a Personality Disorder" and a discussion of the DSM-5 classifications.

Emily Hartz, '01, with Sloan Law Firm; Reggie Jackson with Jackson Psychotherapy & Satori Program, Lawrence, Kansas; and Shannon Reid with the Willow Domestic Violence Program in Lawrence, Kansas, offered suggestions for "Domestic Violence Safety Planning in the Divorce Context." Bethany Roberts, family law practitioner, advised attendees on the ethical rules as applied to lawyers serving as neutrals.

Ronnie Beach, Conflict Resolution Services, Inc., Olathe, Kansas, facilitated a conversation between two parents about "What It's Like to be Parent Coordinated." Steve Henry, '04, discussed the challenges case managers face in helping clients make difficult decisions that they either do not want or cannot seem to make.

Larry Rute, '73, reported on the proposals the Dispute Resolution

Advisory Council made to the Kansas Supreme Court last fall.

The Honorable Kevin O'Grady, third judicial district, provided insights into what types of parenting plan provisions help high-conflict families. The last speaker, Rebecca Gerhardt, '05, staff counsel at the Kansas Department for Children and Families, discussed mandatory reporting of abuse and the three-tiered funding structure that went into effect in 2015.

CFLC LUNCH AND LEARNS

DACA - Law, Politics, and What You Can Do

GILLIAN CHADWICK AND DAVID RUBENSTEIN

On September 27, 2017, Washburn Law Professors Gillian Chadwick and David Rubenstein presented "DACA – Law, Politics & What You Can Do." They explained DACA, its processes, and the implications of the federal removal of DACA protections for immigrants and immigration law professionals.

Using ADR to Promote International Human Rights

HON. JULIET HARTY HATANGA

On October 2, 2017, The Honorable Juliet Harty Hatanga, magistrate, City Hall Court in Uganda, presented "Using ADR to Promote International Human Rights." Hatanga is a former fellow of the Leadership and Advocacy for Women in Africa (LAWA) Fellowship Program, Georgetown University Law Center. She has served as a magistrate judge in Kampala, Uganda, since 2007.

A Child's Right to Free and Appropriate Education

BETHANY J. ROBERTS

On October 26, 2017, Washburn Law Adjunct Professor Bethany J. Roberts, attorney with Barber Emerson, L.C. in Lawrence, Kansas, presented "A Child's Right to Free & Appropriate Education." She offered insights about working with children in the legal system and issues regarding access to special and regular education services.

Mediation and Military Families

TONYA RICKLEFS

On November 7, 2017, Washburn University Assistant Professor of Social Work Tonya Ricklefs discussed challenges in mediating domestic cases for military families, including the overlay of military law and civilian law, and the difficulty of mediating over long distances.

Advocating for Abused and Neglected Children

LIZ BILLINGER, '15

On February 5, 2018, Liz Billinger, '15, an ADA at the Johnson County District Attorney's Office focusing on CINC and Juvenile Offender cases, presented "Advocating for Abused and Neglected Children through the Child in Need of Care Law." She explained when a child may be allowed to testify by video, discussed reasonable efforts that must be made prior to the termination of parental rights, and noted the absence of a right to a speedy trial for a juvenile in Kansas. She also provided a summary of pending legislation to keep an eye on that may have an impact on these proceedings.

Child Participation in Family Separation Disputes

STACEY PLATT

On February 23, 2018, Stacey Platt, CFLC Practitioner in Residence, presented "Set Another Place at the Table: Child Participation in Family Separation Dispute," based on a recently published article. She discussed the benefits of child participation, including procedural fairness and the acknowledgment of child agency, as well as ways to move children's voices forward, such as expanding judicial training on child interviewing.

2017-18 PRACTITIONER IN RESIDENCE

Professor Stacey Platt

Stacey Platt is a clinical professor of law and associate director of the Civitas ChildLaw Clinic at Loyola University Chicago

School of Law. She and her clinic students represent children in legal proceedings, focusing on private family disputes.

Platt is on the board of directors of the Association of Family and Conciliation Courts, the editorial board of the Family Court Review, and the Joint Editorial Board on Family Law for the Uniform Law Commission. She teaches litigation skills to lawyers across the country as a member of the ABA Commission on Domestic and Sexual Violence's training team.

While at Washburn Law, Platt met with students at several networking lunches and dinners, in addition to presenting a Lunch and Learn session about her recent article "Set Another Place at the Table: Child Participation in Family Separation Dispute," published in the Cardozo Journal of Conflict Resolution.

Platt is a recipient of the Chicago Bar Association's Leonard Jay Schrager Award of Excellence for her contribution to improving access to justice.

Chadwick Files Federal Amicus Brief

Washburn Law Clinic Professor Gillian Chadwick, associate director of Washburn Law's CFLC, filed an amicus brief in federal court on behalf of the Center to advocate for the rights of adopted children under immigration law.

The CFLC is concerned with public policy issues affecting the welfare of children, including protecting the rights of adopted children and preserving family structures. The Center works to advance the rights of children and families through such methods as serving as amicus curiae in cases where legal issues affect children and families.

Chadwick described the case as a Kansas family working to obtain legal permanent residence for their adopted child. The case turns on a provision of federal immigration law that invokes state family law to determine whether a child qualifies to obtain legal permanent residency status from a U.S. citizen parent. Chadwick's brief analyzes the state law question under Kansas law and raises related constitutional arguments.

Legal status for foreign-born children adopted by American parents is a complex legal issue. The Adoptee Rights Campaign, an advocacy group, estimates that 35,000 adult adoptees in the United States lack citizenship, which has driven a slew of recent deportations. Many of those affected did not even know they were not American citizens until they were ordered to leave the country.

"This issue is prominent in the news today," Chadwick said, "because foreign-born children can be adopted in the U.S. but then deported for administrative law reasons, which completely destabilizes their family. This can really ruin people's lives. That's why the Center is interested in advocating in support of the family in this case."

Washburn Law Clinic Helps Secure $8 million Human Trafficking Judgment

The Washburn Law Clinic, in collaboration with McGuireWoods LLP, helped secure an $8 million judgment on behalf of a human trafficking survivor on May 23, 2018.

The award comes after a federal judge in Kansas City found that the plaintiff, Kendra Ross, had been forced to work over 40,000 uncompensated hours by a "regimented cult" from 2002 to 2012. Experts say the judgment is the largest single-plaintiff trafficking award in American history.

Clinic Professor Gillian Chadwick, along with Connor Goodman, '18, have worked on Ross's legal team since last September, with assistance from Abby Hoelting, '18, in the fall of 2017. Attorney Betsy Hutson led the pro bono team from McGuireWoods.

FAMILY LAW CERTIFICATE

Students who want a concentration in family law have the opportunity to earn a Family Law Certificate. The student must consult with a family law advisor and take 12 hours of family law classes, write a research paper on a family law topic and have 12 hours of pro bono work in a family law-related area. The student must maintain a 3.0 average in any classes that count toward the certificate. Since it began in 2003, 102 students have earned the Family Law Certificate.

December Graduates Earn Family Law Certificates

Mike Payton, '17, and Kristin Moorhead, '17, with Center Director Linda Elrod

Washburn University School of Law's Children and Family Law Center prepares law students to provide high-quality legal representation for children and to advocate to improve the quality of justice for children and their families.

Students partner with faculty members, practicing lawyers, judges, social workers, and mental health professionals in an educational program designed to provide them with the knowledge and tools they will need to represent both child and adult clients successfully. In addition to the traditional classes, the Center offers students training in crucial skills such as counseling, negotiation, mediation, interdisciplinary research, and advocacy.
