

Greetings to the Saints of Mission Presbytery!

Y'all continue to amaze me. From the vantage point of this office, I get to see young leaders being developed through the Midwinters Planning Team and Youth Coordinating Committee. I get to be part of deep conversations regarding the futures of our congregations and pastoral leaders. I get to watch dozens of volunteers give of their energy, intelligence, imagination and love to further God's mission in the southern fifth of Texas. I get to visit, pray, drink coffee, break bread, counsel, be counseled, and laugh a lot with you all. I get to think and dream and write. I get to work with some amazing colleagues, both here in the office and among our congregations. And every so often, I catch a little glimpse of what God may be bringing to pass among us. Amazing!

I also get to witness the talent among us - which means that today I want to tell you about a couple of new books produced by our colleagues.

Bob Lively, whose family I have known since before I can recall, has a new book called So What's The Point? A Primer for True Spiritual Awakening. I commend it to you because of Bob's gift for storytelling, because of the true portraits he paints of some of the loved ones in his life, and for the spiritual awakening it may provide for you. As usual, it's good wisdom from our good friend.

You also need to know about Carolyn Browning Helsel's new book, Anxious to Talk about it: Helping White Christians Talk Faithfully about Racism. What could be more timely? It's being released any minute now, and there's a free study guide available. Plus, mark your calendars now for an event on Saturday, March 10 with Carolyn at Crossroads Presbyterian Church in San Antonio. More information to come!
