

The Auschwitz Institute for Peace and Reconciliation invites you to join us in celebrating the launch of Getting Down to Business

Uncovering the roles played by enterprises in enabling and preventing atrocity crimes the latest entry in AIPR's Sheri P. Rosenberg Policy Papers in Prevention series

Featuring the author

Tatiana Gos

Tatiana Gos is the Auschwitz Institute for Peace and Reconciliation's Academic Programs Officer for Latin America. She holds a Master of Studies in International Human Rights Law from the University of Oxford, a law degree specializing in Public International Law from the University of Buenos Aires, and is a Certified Risk and Compliance Management Professional. Since 2013, she has worked as a consultant based in Panama City, Panama after having spent several years as a lawyer with the General Public Defender's Office in Argentina and, later, as a Human Rights Specialist at the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (OAS). Her main areas of work include international litigation, criminal and human rights law, gross human rights violations, businesses' human rights responsibilities, and transitional justice.

The launch event will feature a presentation of the publication as well as remarks by the author and the President of AIPR's Board of Directors, Owen Pell, with a reception to follow.
