

The Auschwitz Institute for Peace and Reconciliation

invites you to join us in celebrating the launch of

A Shifting Paradigm

Social media and the changing nature of conflict and conflict response the latest entry in AIPR's Sheri P. Rosenberg Policy Papers in Prevention series

Featuring the author
Christopher McNaboe

Christopher McNaboe initially joined The Carter Center in 2012 as an intern and later became a graduate assistant in the Conflict Resolution Program. During that time, he developed what is now the Syria Conflict Mapping Project and officially joined the program to formalize and expand the Project in December of 2012.

A dual U.S.-U.K. citizen, Mr. McNaboe has spent the majority of his life abroad, growing up in Saudi Arabia, Indonesia, and Kuwait before coming to the United States at the outset of the U.S. invasion of Iraq. Since that time, McNaboe has lived in several countries while pursuing his undergraduate and graduate degrees. He holds two Bachelor's Degrees in Politics and Language Studies (Linguistics and Spanish), as well as a Master's Degree in International Policy Studies with a concentration in Conflict Resolution from the Monterey Institute of International Studies. He speaks English, Spanish, and Arabic.

The launch event will include a presentation of the publication and remarks by the author, with a reception to follow.
