PRESIDENT'S NOTES

By Mike Alford

Here we are at the end of another year, I don't have anything new in the way of news on the political front everything seems to be moving along as it should with the fix to measure "B" with a due date of early 2017. As this year comes to a close we look forward to the new year with anticipation, some will make resolutions of better behavior in areas of their lives that they think need improvement and others will hold hope for a better living situation. Whatever your future outlook, I want to wish each of you a Merry Christmas and a happy New Year. May 2017 be your year for fulfillment of your heart's desires. Be safe, enjoy your family and friends. See you in January.

AFTER RECOUNT, SYLVIA ARENAS STILL TOPS JIMMY NGUYEN IN DISTRICT 8

While debates about the Electoral College and forced recounts raged across the country this month, San Jose had its very own recount nail biter. In the race to replace Councilmember Rose Herrera in the District 8 council seat, Evergreen School District Boardmember Sylvia Arenas remained the leader after an automatic recount was conducted. The official margin of victory was 97 votes.

Now, it wouldn't be the 2016 election season without a little bit more controversy. Despite the recount, Jimmy Nguyen is not accepting the Registrar of Voters' results. Instead, according to the Mercury News, he will pay for his own separate recount.

For those who don't remember, this is not without precedent. Earlier this year, Councilmember Mahn Nguyen refused to accept his defeat in the District 4 race by challenge Lan Diep. Councilmember Nguyen forced several recounts, all to no avail. Diep will take Nguyen's seat on January 1, 2017.

We do not anticipate a different result from Jimmy Nguyen's forced recount. So, with that, the new council will see labor endorsed candidates take the District 8 seat and retain the District 2 seat (formerly held by Ash Kalra). This is positive momentum for building a City Council who respects the perspectives and rights of employees and retirees.

CITY MISMANAGEMENT MAY COST RETIREES THOUSANDS

The City of San Jose has admitted to miscalculating the amounts retirees and survivors are supposed to receive in their monthly pension checks dating back to 1998. The total amount the City miscalculated is approximately $1 million. The issue affects approximately 300 retirees. Retirement Services has begun notifying fire retirees. Police retirees will likely be notified beginning in January.

To make matters worse, the City has known about the problem since 2009. While unthinkable, they have taken seven years to determine which retirees were overpaid, which were underpaid, and for each, by how much money.

It is our understanding that the Retirement Fund (not the City's General Fund) must be made whole based on IRS regulations. However, it seems patently unfair to simply allow the City of San Jose to absolve themselves of a problem they created, a problem they allowed to fester for 7 years, simply by saying "oops."

We've been informed that for some, the amounts are relatively modest, perhaps a few hundred dollars. For others, however, the amounts could be several thousand dollars. Regardless, the City's miscalculation has cost retirees and the fund, approximately $1 million. Moreover, their inability to fix the problem for seven years undoubtedly led to retirees continuing to be overpaid and underpaid, compounding the problem. This is negligence and certainly needs to be recognized by the City.

A similar, but not the same, problem happened with the Federated retirees last month. In that case, for former executive level employees, the Federated retirement fund paid higher-earning employees above an IRS limit on what public employees can receive in pension payments. In at least one case, the City had been paying a former department head incorrectly for over 12 years to a tune of $212,000. The Federated retirement board has filed suit against the City in this case, alleging the City should pay the Federated fund over $500,000 in overpayments and an additional $300,000 in interest. Needless to say, the City is expected to fight back vigorously.

The Retirement Board will consider this matter at its next meeting on January 5, 2017. The meeting will begin approximately at 9:30 AM at San Jose City Hall. Now would be a good time to make sure we have your e-mail address so we can keep you up to speed as quickly as possible on this issue.
