

The DuPont Brothers at Brandon Music

Sam and Zack DuPont form the sibling indie-folk-rock duo, The DuPont Brothers. They're based out of Burlington but they're not there very much. The duo has been living on the indie circuit, driving around sharing their stories through songwriting since 2013. On December 9 they perform at Brandon Music in what will be one of their last performances as 'The DuPont Brothers'.

Back from a mid-west tour, the brothers will perform new original songs from their much anticipated upcoming release. The new album is the start of a rebranding for 2018 with a sound that will have more of a rhythmic pulse. Check them out at Brandon Music to catch a glimpse of where the brothers' music is headed and be a part of their new chapter.

The brothers have been on an independent pursuit to get their music into as many ears as possible, and have been quite successful. Their two studio releases and two live albums have taken them on tour all over the Northeast, Mid Atlantic, South and Midwest. The DuPont Brothers have made festival appearances at Grand Point North and SXSW and have supported a wide array of national acts of all shapes, sizes and genres including Kishi Bashi, Johnnyswim, The Lone Bellow, Gin Wigmore, Langhorne Slim, Joseph, Livingston Taylor, Bahamas, Ben Sollee and Patrick Watson along with Grammy award-winning artists Sturgill Simpson, Jerry Douglas, Blake Mills, Suzanne Vega and Pat Benatar.
