Advancing Women's Political Leadership in MA Cities and Towns

March 14, 2018

"Women Mayors Making a Difference"

UMass Club
One Beacon Street
Boston, MA
4-6:30 p.m.

Massachusetts has 351 cities and towns; 48 of these have mayors. However, only 20% of the mayors are women. Come hear four women mayors—from different regions of the state—discuss their election campaigns, their policy priorities, and their perspectives on what it will take to make gender parity the norm for Massachusetts mayors.

"A Critical Mass at Last: Women of Boston City Council"

UMass Club
One Beacon Street
Boston, MA
4-6:30 p.m.

For many years, the Boston City Council seemed like a mostly white men's club. True diversity did not come until 2009 when Ayanna Pressley became the first woman of color ever elected to the council. Now, the council has six women of color—almost a majority! These councilors will speak about their path to elected leadership and their vision for a diverse, inclusive Boston.

"Impacting Education Policy: Women School Committee Members Speak Out"

The Boston Foundation
75 Arlington Street
Boston, MA
4-6:30 p.m.

School committee members are important voices in their communities, allocating resources and shaping policies. School committee membership is also a key pipeline for electing women at all levels of state government. Women school committee members from across the state will discuss their election campaigns and their vision for high-quality schools in every city and town.
