

A Kettle of One

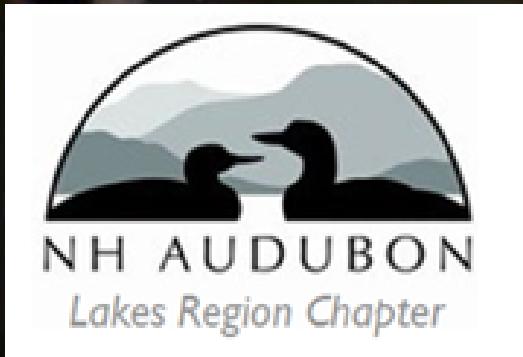

Eric Masterson:

“It's hard to appreciate the epic nature of trans-continental bird migration when we can make the same journey in a matter of hours.

In September 2016 I set out on a six-month pilgrimage by bicycle to follow several geo-tagged Broad-winged Hawks on their southbound migration from the northeastern United States to wintering grounds in South America.

The project is the research phase of a book that will celebrate the extraordinary nature of long distance bird migration.”
