Senior Workforce Strategist Dr. Chris Laney will discuss the value of recent labor market data and its relationship to the "sansdemic" employers must navigate to fill open positions. This phenomenon has caused a significant deficit of job candidates that continues to create hiring challenges across industries.

Workforce professionals will discover approaches to address long-term challenges caused by population shifts, public health concerns, and the erosion of prime-age working adults. Dr. Laney will suggest ways for employers to recognize these factors and best prepare for a new future of workforce.
