

TRAUMA AT THE INTERSECTION OF POVERTY AND DISCRIMINATION

This training will use the concept of intersectionality to explore how poverty and discrimination create trauma impact. Attendees will identify the unique challenges faced by people who experience multiple forms of oppression and develop strategies for working with people who have experienced poverty, trauma, and discrimination in a trauma-informed and culturally competent way.

Thursday, December 11

9:30am-12:30pm

Zoom

REGISTER NOW

CEU Eligible

Nadja Mummery

Founder of Learn to Heal Consulting and Bucks-Mont Collaborative Training Institute Coordinator

Nadja Mummery is a seasoned community educator with over a decade of experience promoting positive change in the Greater Philadelphia and North Penn regions. Nadja has been instrumental in developing trauma-informed and racial equity programs focused on poverty, trauma, and discrimination.

Beyond her direct program work, Nadja has also provided training to organizations and individuals, equipping them with tools to navigate these complex issues through Learn to Heal Consulting.

As the Training Institute Coordinator with the Bucks-Mont Collaborative, Nadja is excited to continue her dedication to community support and training. Her work centers on building knowledge and promoting equitable, trauma-informed practices within the community.

Montgomery County is committed to providing access, equal opportunity and reasonable accommodation in its services, programs, and employment. To receive accommodation for this Zoom event, complete our request form at least 5 days prior to the event. Contact Donna L. Richemond with questions: 610-278-1499 or email at donna.richemond@montgomerycountypa.gov