

RELIGIOUS DIVERSITY IN OUR LIVES AND WORKPLACES

This thought-provoking program is ideal for participants who have worked in religiously diverse contexts and want to explore issues of diversity in more depth. Developing experience in supporting religiously diverse settings fosters employee retention, builds team connections and allows the shared values of co-workers to make the workplace a more welcoming setting. Companies that promote workplace diversity tend to increase reach and contact with a wider population, clients, and customers.

Rev. Edward Livingston
 Director of Community Partnerships,
 Interfaith Philadelphia

Edward Livingston holds a Master of Divinity degree from The Lutheran Theological Seminary at Philadelphia (now United Lutheran Seminary) and studied Globalization and Ecumenism at the World Council of Churches in Geneva, Switzerland.

He has over a decade of experience in local and national interfaith community organizing with the Direct Action Research Training Network and Faith in Action (formerly PICO National Network). Edward also served on the Executive Committee of the Philadelphia Association and as Consistory Vice Moderator to the Pennsylvania Southeast Conference of the United Church of Christ.

Edward is drawn to this work out of a commitment to equity—that we should all have access to be our best selves in community, and that all people are made in the image and likeness of God. Edward currently serves as Pastor of Dryland United Church of Christ in Nazareth. He is happily married to the Reverend Emily Ann Garcia Livingston.
