Nonprofit organizations and government teams are being asked to do more with less—while navigating constant change. That pressure can either burn teams out or bring the next generation of leaders forward.

This session will explore how to intentionally develop emerging leaders to thrive in agile, lean environments. We'll look at practical ways to embed mentorship within and beyond your organization, and how to cultivate growth-ready teams so staff see challenges as chances to innovate and learn, not reasons to stop.

Through real-world examples, simple tools, and peer discussion, participants will leave with concrete ideas they can start using immediately—no big budget or extra staff required.
