Regional Chamber Senior VP Earns Leadership Certification

ROCK HILL, SC – The Regional Chamber is pleased to announce that Colleen Dick, the organization's Senior Vice President, has earned the designation of Certified Leadership Development Professional from the Institute of Organization Development. The certification course focuses on designing leadership development strategies and is key to the chamber's core initiative of supporting the Talent and Workforce needs of business in our region.

Among other responsibilities, Colleen has managed the Leadership York County program since 2002 and most recently launched the pilot of the chamber's LeadershipCORE course for new and emerging managers, along with other leadership-focused training workshops. She is also a graduate of the US Chamber's Institute for Organization Management and is a Certified Chamber Executive of the Carolinas. Regional Chamber President & CEO Dean Faile shared that "the Chamber has been hyper-focused on building our capacity to provide high quality leadership and talent development for any business looking to advance their team's ability to compete in today's economy, especially as it relates to leading and inspiring a strong team culture. With this latest certification, coupled with Colleen's experience, the chamber can help businesses build both external and internal pipelines for employees at every level through specialized leadership content designed specifically for your business".
