

Diversity and You Competition | School of Journalism and Mass Communications

Deadline April 9

The School of Journalism is holding its first-ever competition for students to submit photos and videos representing the subject Diversity and You. Entrants have a wide latitude to express their views of diversity as it affects them and others.

Each category will have two judges, a professor and professional from a relevant field. Entries will be displayed in the Clarkson Gallery beginning April 23, in conjunction with William Allen White Week.

Awards will be offered in each category:

First Place: $400

Second Place: $200

Third Place: $100

Photo Essay

Students submit 3 to 5 photos that offer a perspective of what diversity is and how it affects, both negatively and positively, others. Photos may be a series that tell a story or individual shots. Photos can be documentary or illustrative. Photos must be submitted as 8 x 10 inch JPGs at a 300 dpi. Both color and black-and-white photos are welcome. Submit entries in zip files to diversityandyou@ku.edu

Videos

Students submit a 60- to 90-second video that offers a perspective of what diversity is, and how it affects, both negatively and positively, others. Videos should tell a story, but do not have to follow a news story format. Filmmaking approaches are welcome. Submit HD YouTube or Vimeo links to diversityandyou@ku.edu
