

Katich Creativity Award

The award is named in honor of John Katich, a dedicated teacher who loved students and inspired them to exceed even their own lofty expectations. He valued ideas that helped students learn and get excited about learning. Among his achievements were the establishment of the sales curriculum, the enhancement of the professionalism of KJHK and the creation of KUJH-TV. John's commitment to students and accomplishments as a teacher inspired the school, his family and friends to establish this award.

Award

The winner will receive $1,000, have their name placed on a plaque, and receive a memento.

Eligibility

- The annual award will go to a faculty member who has demonstrated creativity in teaching, research, service, or a combination of these areas. Past winners will be eligible again in five years.
- The creativity may have been manifest in a class, a single class lesson, an advising or mentoring procedure, a research activity, or exemplary service to the School, KU, the profession or the community.
- The creativity may relate to a single event or a body of work. We define a creativity as something that is 1) novel, 2) useful and 3) not obvious to someone in journalism education. (This is adapted from the definition of an invention by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office.)
- A fourth factor often associated with creativity is the element of surprise.
- Keep in mind the importance of the Katich concept of challenging and helping students.

Procedures

- We encourage all faculty members to nominate eligible colleagues for this award. We also encourage self-nominations. We realize this faculty is modest about their accomplishments, but we urge colleagues to put their modesty aside and apply for this award.
- Prepare a 1-2 page statement explaining the way (or ways) you or your nominee has met the creativity criteria. Please outline what you have done this past year or in past years that has been creative and enhanced the learning experience for our students. Attach pertinent examples or evidence.
- Send nominations to Dean Brill, 200 Stauffer-Flint, by 5 p.m., Friday, March 31.
- A committee comprised of two recent recipients will review nominations and make recommendations to the Dean's Advisory Group, who will make the final decision by Tuesday, April 18.

If you have questions about any of this, please contact Dean Brill. We look forward to hearing from you soon. Thanks.
