

CLEVELAND BALLET

MEET PAUL SIEMBORSKI, CLEVELAND BALLET BOARD MEMBER

Cleveland Ballet is pleased to welcome Paul Siemborski to our Board of Directors. As an architect, Paul offers a unique perspective to performing arts and culture, focusing on the venue aspect, particularly through his expertise in preservation and adaptive reuse projects.

A passionate advocate for saving America's historic theaters, Paul has been involved in 50+ projects spanning his 40-year career, ranging from large-scale, multi-phased restorations and expansions to small-scale renovations. While Paul has projects throughout the country, here locally his planning and project work is evident in the renovation of Karamu House and St. Ignatius High School's Breen Center for the Performing Arts.

A resident of University Heights, Paul is also a long-standing board member of the Cleveland Playhouse, the University Heights Planning Commission, St. Ignatius High School Facilities Committee, and Gesu Administration Committee.

Paul received his undergraduate degree in architecture from The Ohio State University and his Master of Architecture from The University of Texas at Arlington.

We are excited to have Paul's aesthetic sensibility and passion for the arts enrich our Board of Directors.
