Martin Announces Re-Election Bid, Citing Work to Complete 9-1-1 Modernization, Property Tax Relief, and Workforce Development Efforts

Alpharetta, GA — State Representative Chuck Martin (R–Alpharetta) announced today that he will seek re-election to the Georgia House of Representatives for District 49 to continue advancing the modernization of emergency response systems, providing property tax relief, and improving educational and workforce opportunities.

“As North Fulton continues to grow, steady leadership matters to ensure we make smart investments that protect our quality of life,” Martin said. “It’s rewarding to use my experience as a former Mayor and current business owner to tackle issues like public safety, tax relief, and workforce alignment. There’s more work ahead.”

Martin serves as Chairman of the House Higher Education Committee and previously chaired the Next Generation 9-1-1 Study Committee, working with public safety officials and education leaders to modernize systems impacting Georgia families.

“Upgrading to NextGen 9-1-1 improves reliability and response times for first responders -- essential infrastructure in fast-growing communities like ours,” Martin said.

Martin has also championed property tax relief, supporting the Georgia HOME Act and measures to reduce the burden on primary residences while maintaining responsible budgeting.

“Families shouldn’t fear being priced out of their homes due to rising assessments,” Martin said. “We’ve made progress, and protecting homeowners remains a priority.”

As Higher Education Chairman, Martin has focused on aligning post-secondary programs with workforce demand in healthcare, technology, and other high-growth industries.

“Education and workforce development are inseparable,” Martin said. “From strengthening early literacy in our elementary schools to improving outcomes in our colleges and universities, we’re strengthening Georgia’s workforce and keeping our students competitive.”

District 49 includes portions of Alpharetta, Milton, and Roswell.
