

Dear Mother Father God -

Please give our city of Houston as much strength to deal with the storm as Harvey brought when descending upon us. Please bring us together in love and help us remember that we are never alone. Many have been through this before - some several times - please give those with knowledge about floods the strength to share it while giving them extra comfort for all they have already been through. Please help us sort through not only the flood aftermath but also the flood of information being put out there. Guide us to find what we need - both the helpers and the ones in despair - so that we may come together for the highest good. Give rest to those who are worn out by this storm. Protect those who are vulnerable. Create among us all a spark that will shine many lights upon the wet soggy world that is our beautiful city. Please help us heal and help us see that, when this is all over, the goodwill and love that flows among us always was there and always will be there.

Amen.
