

FREE CORONAVIRUS HEALTH AND SAFETY TELEPHONE SERVICE

For our Farming and Other Business Customers from our Team of Experts

We understand that these are challenging times with Government restrictions in place due to Coronavirus. Feedback from our customers has told us that this is impacting the ways of working on farms and in other businesses and that they need help and guidance on how to work safely, either through reviewing current activity or in preparation for re-opening their businesses.

Farms and other businesses now need to adapt their ways of working to incorporate new processes, new employees, and new working practices – all of which carry different and potentially new health and safety risks.

That's why we're launching our free remote Health and Safety Telephone Service, to offer you tailored guidance and expertise in the current climate. This will be delivered by our team of health and safety experts who are working remotely.

This service is available to all our farming and other business customers and provides you with online information on how to manage the challenges businesses are facing with Coronavirus, and a free telephone consultation with one of our 80 specialist risk management experts. With extensive multi-sector experience, our risk management team are on hand to talk through a broad range of concerns, including areas such as training new or inexperienced workers, social distancing in the workplace, unoccupied buildings or re-opening your business safely.
