

April 2017

Dear Friends:

This is National Crime Victims' Rights Week.

It is a time when we recognize those people and groups who help support victims of crime. It also is a special time for this office. It has been 40 years since we established what is now the Bureau of Victim Services.

We've come a long way – and we still have a lot of work to do.

To commemorate these groups, we are having a special celebration this Saturday, April 8. It's a Jubilee and Recognition Walk. The walk will start at the Hall of Justice and continue to Grand Park. It will culminate in the shadow of the Criminal Courts Building.

We invite you to join us in celebrating those people and those victims who have shown strength and resilience in tough times during their lives.

We also want to remind you that it takes all of us to help support these crime victims and to seek justice on their behalf.
