

Waiver & Release

All persons who attend in persons are asked to sign this document before attending the march. If anyone does not feel comfortable signing this statement, then we kindly ask that you not attend the Georgia Prayer March. Here is the statement to which every attendee of the march needs to agree to and sign:

I understand that the present cultural, political and electoral environment presents risk of injury and that it is commonplace for threats to be made and bad acts to be committed both against persons attending events like the Georgia Prayer March. Therefore, I agree to waive and release all claims, and hold harmless Well Versed, Inc., organizations affiliated with the Georgia Prayer March, all speakers, and persons involved officially and unofficially with the March. I agree that such organizations and persons are not responsible for my safety or protections from threats of terrorism, violence whether those threats are known, unknown, credible, or not credible. I agree that I am solely and completely responsible for my safety and I knowingly and willingly agree to assume the known and unknown risks associated with attending the March.
