We discussed starting a campaign supporting this view of housing by promoting this idea among faith communities and other civic groups to help build a movement to change the narrative around housing. At our last meeting, we met with Ritti Singh, the Rochester organizer for Housing Justice for All. We learned they have a long-range vision of supporting social or public housing, but to get there, we need to address some immediate concerns of people who face housing vulnerability. Their current platform and legislative agenda is Our Homes Our Power.

We also encourage our readers to consider joining the City-Wide Tenant Union and their local campaign to support tenants in their effort to gain housing justice for people with very low incomes.

The next meeting of the Advocacy Team will be via ZOOM on Wednesday, April 5, at 4:00 p.m. If you want to join us, please send your name and contact information to info@reachadvocay.org.
