

Josh Tolbert is an Assistant Professor at Indiana University East who teaches courses over special education and assessment. He earned a B.A. from Western Michigan University, with a double major in Spanish and art education. He later earned an M.A. in liberal studies and an Ed.D. in special education, both from the University of Michigan-Dearborn.

His K-12 experience included serving as a teacher of students with learning disabilities, as well as being an instructor of Spanish and visual arts. His past and present research interests include Spanish vocabulary instruction for students with specific learning disabilities, classroom management, and disproportionate school discipline for students with IDEA disabilities.