Bio. Dr. Christina Loiacono (Low ya' ca no) is a graduate of the Virginia-Maryland College of Veterinary Medicine and completed a residency in Veterinary Anatomic Pathology at the University of Missouri-Columbia where she also received a PhD. Dr. Loiacono joined the National Veterinary Services Laboratories in 2005 as a veterinary pathologist focused on foreign animal disease diagnostics and education. She transitioned to NVSL's National Animal Health Laboratory Network as Associate Coordinator in 2011 and was selected to be the network Coordinator in 2017. Dr. Loiacono currently leads a network of 60 Federal, State and University-associated animal diagnostic laboratories across the US providing surveillance and outbreak response testing for 14 diseases of high consequence.