A five-week interstate closure begins on Friday, September 11, and it will change travel times across the Portland-Vancouver area. Here's what you should know.

Late Friday night on September 11, ODOT is closing all SOUTHBOUND lanes of I-5 through Portland's Rose Quarter, between I-405 and I-84. The closure runs around the clock for up to 5 weeks while crews complete repairs.

Southbound traffic is being detoured to I-405, with the longer-distance trips routed to I-205.

Northbound I-5 remains open. However, ODOT expects overall travel times to run 2-3 times longer than usual, with backups reaching across the I-5 bridge into Clark County. Expect I-205, SR-14, and local surface streets to absorb the overflow traffic.
