Not averse to verse, Theo has been writing poetry since adolescence. She was in the first graduating class of The High School of Performing Arts (Drama major) where she won the creative writing award, got her BA from CCNY (English major, Phi Beta Kappa), and her MA in Theater from Sarah Lawrence College.

She then embarked on a teaching career in the Theater Department of The College of White Plains and The Excel Program at Fordham University.

Years later, after branching off into jewelry design, clay sculpture, and motherhood, she has found her poetic voice again at OLLI, and shares her personal insights in this first volume of her collected poetry.
