

Convivial Creativity, a FREE webinar series developed to help you live happily and successfully in this new world of ours.

Hey folks, get a load of this: We're offering Carl Nordgren and Mark Tully's four part webinar series Convivial Creativity. You may recognize Carl's name—last year nearly 100 of you attended his live two hour creativity workshop, 'Becoming a Creative Genius (again)', and similarly large numbers signed up for his series of creativity seminars that we had to cancel in the first week of UNCA's lock down.

He has partnered up with Mark Tully—Mark's insights into neuroscience will help you get more satisfaction from your daily behaviors and become a better learner. They are offering you four 90 minute webinars that will:

- * Review three recent neuroscience research projects, each one revealing biological changes to a 55+ brain that invite a significant creative renewal.

- * Share Convivial Creative concepts and behaviors that will 1) enrich your life, 2) will cultivate your imagination, and 3) help nurture creative relations between you and other individuals. These concepts will help accelerate and sustain your creative renewal.

- *Provide a framework that invites participants to work together in anticipation of the end of our social isolation, considering all the good answers to the all important question of the moment, "How can we make things better than they used to be?"

Each webinar will be fun, fast paced, and as interactive as the technology allows.
The schedule: Monday, 4/20, 4/27, 5/4, and 5/11 from 10 am to 11:30 am.

Please register at our Eventbrite page. When you click on the orange 'Select a Date' button you will see the four dates listed above—you can sign up for all or select individual webinars if your schedule won't permit your full participation. You will share your email with us at registration and on Friday before the first webinar we will send you the link for the webinar.
