

5 Helpful Ideas from All Those “Leading in a Crisis” Emails We Are Receiving
Curated by John Wertz, Jr.
June 29, 2020

1. “Culture is changing rapidly, which means people are changing rapidly. If you want to reach people, that probably also means you need to change your approach rapidly.” - Carey Nieuwhof discusses the need to change our method of delivering the good news about Jesus even though message about Jesus doesn’t change. <https://careynieuwhof.com/5-specific-ways-the-way-we-do-church-is-badly-outdated/>
2. “Cheapest Live Stream Setup for Churches (That Still Look Awesome)” – Brady Shearer provides a step-by-step by guide to configuring a livestream system for your church. <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=LrZ7WFGHaLg&feature=youtu.be>
3. “Can the church let opportunity take the place of urgency as a driver of change?” – While urgency has motivated many congregations to make changes over the last month, Sarai Rice invites us to embrace the opportunities for ministry that are before us if we are willing to continue to make changes. <https://www.congregationalconsulting.org/urgency-works-but-is-it-the-only-driver-of-change/>
4. “It’s exciting to consider the prospect of ‘going back to normal.’ But the truth is, there is no ‘going back to normal.’” - Carey Nieuwhof offers three suggestions for building a solid foundation for congregational ministry moving forward. <https://careynieuwhof.com/not-out-of-the-woods-yet-3-keys/>
5. “Zach Lambert of Restore Austin Church says that the move to digital gatherings reveals that content is important, but our connections are imperative. He believes online ministry must intentionally create spaces where deep friendship can blossom.” - <https://www.churchleadership.com/leading-ideas/connection-is-more-important-than-content-in-digital-gatherings/>