CHAMBER ENERGY PROGRAM

WHY SEPTEMBER AND OCTOBER ARE THE BEST MONTHS TO REVIEW ENERGY CONTRACTS

Many businesses wait until a contract is about to expire—sometimes in the middle of winter—before reviewing their energy supply options.

Doing that work in September and October gives you time to make informed decisions before peak heating season.

Early fall is an ideal window to:

- Confirm renewal dates and any automatic-renewal provisions in your current contracts.
- Compare available rate options and see how they align with your risk tolerance and budget goals.
- Consider whether you want to lock in price stability ahead of winter or maintain more flexibility.
- Identify any efficiency or usage-reduction projects that could complement your supply strategy.

Through the Chamber Energy Program, members can access support to review existing agreements and evaluate alternatives at no cost. Contact the Chamber to schedule a review before winter arrives.

Visit chamberenergyprogram.com to request your free bill review.