- Identify the challenges facing LGBTQ+ people in their home, school, work and other environments
- Explain the risk factors and warning signs of suicide
- Describe how to respond to a person who is at risk for suicide and connect them to appropriate resources
- Explain how to create supportive environments for all people that promote resiliency and decrease the risk of suicide

TRAINER BIO

Keygan Miller is the Director of Public Training for The Trevor Project, the leading suicide prevention and crisis intervention organization for LGBTQ+ young people. Keygan leads the strategy and implementation for the Public Training Team including managing new program development, facilitating high impact training, and analyzing impact metrics all to advance Trevor's life-saving suicide prevention work and teach audiences to be strong allies for LGBTQ+ youth. Prior to this work, Keygan was an Advocacy Manager at The Trevor Project where they were responsible for researching and strategizing on a variety of advocacy and policy initiatives impacting LGBTQ+ youth at local, state, and federal levels, as well as managing day-to-day operations for the Advocacy team. Keygan previously served as an Intervention Specialist for Cincinnati Public Schools where they taught math and science, led as the school-wide testing coordinator, and advised the student council.
