

Rich Boltizar is the Founder and CEO of UniRev, where he helps universities simplify how they accept, track, and understand payments across campus. Drawing on a background in software development, solution architecture, and higher-ed operations, he focuses on making payment processes easier for departments while strengthening controls, visibility, systems integrations, and efficiency-focused automations for central finance and treasury.

Rich previously served as the business architect and project lead for Stanford University's Merchant Services Transformation and completed his undergraduate degree at Stanford. His work on that initiative, and the subsequent creation of UniRev, was recognized with the 2025 AFP Pinnacle Award for innovation in treasury and payments. The UniRev platform delivers intuitive workflows, accelerates period-close procedures, and provides transaction-level granularity enabling last-mile general ledger booking to improve efficiency and reduce errors for distributed finance teams.
