

I'm thrilled to announce that Chris Nagus will be joining KMOV TV as our new News Director, effective July 7th.

Chris is a familiar face to many of us and a true St. Louis native. He brings over 25 years of journalism experience to this role, with a career that's taken him from the front lines of local news to leading storytelling initiatives across multiple markets.

Many of you will remember Chris from his 13 years as an investigative reporter right here at KMOV, where he was instrumental in covering the biggest stories impacting the St. Louis region. Before that, his career journey included stints at KOMU TV in Columbia/Jefferson City, KCCI Des Moines, and KMBC Kansas City. He is a proud graduate of the University of Missouri.

More recently, Chris has been focused on developing top journalistic talent. He spent nearly four years with EW Scripps as their Senior Director of Storytelling and Content Strategy, where he led a team of Executive Reporters across more than 30 newsrooms, helping them build strong brands and create differentiated stories. He's currently working with Graham Media Group, dedicated to improving journalism in major markets like Houston, Detroit, and Orlando.

Chris is a strong advocate for impactful storytelling, building a strong brand identity, and growing audiences through a true multiplatform approach. We're excited for him to bring this passion and expertise to KMOV.

On a personal note, Chris and his wife Katie are raising 14-year-old triplet boys who will be starting high school at Parkway Central in the fall.

Please join me in giving Chris a warm welcome back to KMOV!

As always, thank you to all of you for the positive IMPACT you make in in our community.
