

Jeff Herman is being promoted to news director for WMAR in Baltimore effective Sept. 10.

Jeff has served as WMAR's assistant news director since 2015 and previously was the station's managing editor, an executive producer and a producer. In his current position, he has helped lead content and newsroom operations, guided investigative work, developed managers and advanced the newsroom's evolution into a continuous, multiplatform operation serving audiences across broadcast, digital and streaming.

Jeff has more than 25 years of newsroom experience, along with a deep understanding of WMAR, the Baltimore community and Scripps' commitment to serving audiences with trusted, relevant journalism.

He began his career as an associate producer at WPMT in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

In his free time, Jeff enjoys hunting, fishing and playing games with friends and family.

Jeff will succeed Kelly Groft, who is leaving Scripps next month.

Throughout her time at the station, Kelly has been deeply committed to developing her team and creating opportunities for people to grow. Jeff's promotion is a meaningful reflection of that commitment and of the strong leadership foundation she has helped build.
