Good afternoon Rick,

While I've spent the past couple of years in radio, I've always considered myself a TV person at heart.

I wanted to share some personal news and, if you'd like, feel free to pass it along:

I have officially retired after a nearly 40-year broadcasting career that began in 1989 at WKRC in Cincinnati.

My career path quite literally circled the country. From Cincinnati, I moved to WHAS in Louisville, then to WDSU in New Orleans, and on to KGW in Portland, where I became an Executive Producer. From there, I headed to WSTM in Syracuse as Assistant News Director before making my final and longest stop in Savannah at WTOC.

At WTOC, I was named News Director in 2000, Regional News Director for Raycom Media in 2010, working alongside our mutual friend Steve Ackermann and supporting more than a dozen news operations across the Southeast, and then Vice President and General Manager in 2015.

After leaving TV in the fall of 2022, I signed on to manage Savannah's only locally owned radio station - WRHQ Q105.3.

Looking back, I've been fortunate to work with talented journalists, broadcasters, and leaders in every market along the way, and I'm grateful for the friendships and experiences that shaped my career. As I begin this next chapter, I'm looking forward to spending more time with family, traveling, getting in a few more rounds of golf, and enjoying retirement.

It's been a remarkable journey (one that started at the now defunct Winona Hospital on Meridian St. there in Indianapolis), and I couldn't have asked for a better one.

I hope you are well.
Larry
