From: Anthony Knopps <aknopps24@gmail.com>
Subject: My New Book

Hey Rick,

I wanted to let you and your readers know that my newest book goes on sale Tuesday, October 24th. This is a children's story looking at the very real issue of traumatic brain injury (something I know all too well after my own accident four years ago-- something you were kind enough to profile).

"My Daddy has a Headache" centers around a young boy who learns that his father was injured while serving overseas.

He is told that his dad now has headaches, and that his life has changed. Tommy tries to understand because he "gets headaches too sometimes" but no one worries about him.

My illustrator is also a TBI patient and we are donating the proceeds to a military charity that works to provide emotional support to returning service members and their families.

The book is available on my website, anthonyknopps.com, and at other major retailers, including Barnes and Noble.

This book follows my December 2022 release of "But We Only Have One Grape", a look at food insecurity through the eyes of a child. Proceeds from that go to a local food bank here in Ohio. If you need any illustrations or anything else for either book, please feel free to let me know.

Thanks for all you do. Your newsletter is a great way to start my week!

Anthony Knopps