Griffin Media names Andy Miller as vice president of digital content

Andy Miller joins the Griffin Media team as vice president of digital content. Miller brings nearly 30 years of experience in local news.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (April 2, 2025) – Griffin Media, an Oklahoma-owned multimedia company, announced today that Andy Miller has joined the team as vice president of digital content. In this role, Miller oversees the storytelling and distribution of original content through multiple digital channels and platforms – station websites, apps, streaming apps, FAST (free ad-supported streaming TV) channels, and social media. Keeping Oklahomans safe, informed, and entertained no matter where they are as they lead their lives in the state.

“We are excited to have Andy join the Griffin team. His vast experience and knowledge will serve him well as he leads our news content to even greater heights,” said Wade Deaver, president of Griffin Media."

Miller will also be succeeding Chuck Maulden as vice president of content for Griffin Media when Maulden retires later this year.

With nearly 30 years of experience in local news, Miller has been fortunate to work alongside teams and journalists at both the station and corporate levels. He and his teams produced high-quality local news that was featured on-air, online, and on social media. Miller worked with stations to launch new newscasts and shows, enhance news products, develop and execute strategic initiatives, and grow audiences. Through it all, his focus has remained on quality, consistency, and supporting the future of responsible and impactful local journalism.

“I have quickly fallen in love with Oklahoma. There is a vibrant energy in the air,” said Miller. “Griffin Media is an integral part of creating this community, and I am honored to be a part of the team. I have been in the media for a long time and have traveled from market to market in my previous job as a traveling news manager. There is something special here; the culture and commitment to excellence for the community are remarkable, and I am eager to continue delivering engaging and impactful stories."

An Illinois native, Miller is a graduate of the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. Before joining Griffin Media, he worked as a news director in the central Illinois region and as a director of local content overseeing multiple stations owned and operated by Nexstar Broadcasting across the Midwest.

In addition to his love for the news, Miller is married to Dr. Angela Green Miller, and they have five children. When they do have spare time, they love to participate in their church and enjoy all that Oklahoma has to offer.
