

From: Michael Garber

Date: Tuesday, February 4, 2025 at 7:48 PM

To: &Washington-DCNEWS-TND-All Cc: Scott Livingston

Subject: a little news about me...

Hey team -

I wanted to let you all know that I will be leaving The National News Desk on Friday, March 7th.

The past 3.5 years have been great in so many ways.

We launched a brand-new product, grew an audience from nothing, and innovated regularly across platforms.

Further, we found each other, a group of people committed to the facts and an audience first approach.

You are the foundation of this great culture, one that I will miss and yet, I am confident it will continue to thrive.

Why am I leaving?

While this experience has been great, it also reinforced that at my core, I am all about local.

I have missed the impact we can make on local community that I live in, holding those in power accountable, and seeing tangible results from our work. It's how I came up and the pull to return has strengthened... more on that to come.

Leaving a job is never easy, but leaving the people is always incredibly difficult.

Thank you for your dedication, your work, and for your desire to excel.

To think that we are closing on 4 million eyeballs a week when we started from zero... is simply an amazing credit to you.

Thank you,

Mike

From: Scott Livingston

Date: February 4, 2025 at 8:06:36 PM EST

To: Michael Garber, &Washington-DCNEWS-TND-All

Subject: Re: a little new about me...

I sincerely appreciate all of Mike's contributions and wish him the very best in his next endeavor. His dedication to fostering a strong culture and shaping a news product that delivers essential and critical context has been truly invaluable.

We're incredibly proud of this team and all the great work we've accomplished together. As we move forward, we remain committed to building and growing this news product, and we're excited for what's ahead.

Looking forward to continuing this journey together!

Scott Livingston

Senior Vice President of News