● University Research Programs

University researchers' goal is to support academic advancements, develop medical curriculum, and contribute to new discoveries in medicine. Programs may include Loma Linda University, UC colleges, Stanford University, and others.

Be thorough in your research, ask your medical provider for recommendations, and find the one that works for you!

● Nonprofit Research Programs

Nonprofit programs often focus on diseases like cancer, neurological disorders, or rare diseases. The goal is to advance treatments, improve health outcomes, or directly contribute to patient well-being. Some examples may include Brain Donor Project, Research For Life, American Association of Tissue Banks, MedCure, and more.

Be thorough in your research, ask your medical provider for recommendations, and find the one that works for you!
