

Oklahoma Program for Continuing Education in Social Work

You Are Invited

Clinical Skills in Suicide Prevention

9-noon

Friday, April 5, 2019

OU-Tulsa Schusterman Center

Learning Center, Room 138

3 hours of CEU credits

Facilitator:

Jonathan Kratz

With the alarming increase in suicides in the United States, it is critical that all clinicians be prepared to engage with suicidal clients using evidence informed screening, assessment, and treatment modalities. In this workshop, we will explore the status quo of clinical competency and severe ethical implications of an under-trained workforce. Upon completing this workshop, participants will be able to:

- Explore the ethical implications of inadequate clinical training for treating suicidality
- Perform a hierarchical suicide screen
- Recognize the need for competency in engaging, assessing, and treating suicidality
- Identify their current level of competency and explore strategies for improving their clinical skills
- Describe the QPR Screening process
- Describe the CAMS assessment and treatment framework and the need for increased clinical capacity in the outpatient management of suicidality
- Identify best practices for engagement, assessment, and treatment of suicidal clients

Master Presenters

Jonathan Kratz, MSW, LCSW is a clinical assistant professor at the University of Oklahoma. He has an extensive background in juvenile justice and forensic social work as well as in mental health and school based services with children and families. Most of his clinical work has been with Spanish speaking populations. He teaches across the direct practice curriculum including courses in mental health, group work, advanced clinical social work theories of practice, and the integrative seminar.

3 CEUs available to LCSW/LMSW
Professionals $45.00/Students Fee

CLICK HERE TO REGISTER